Cleverly Covered In Camborne

Cliffy Robinson of Butynol Fixers Wellington and Richard Watt Builder came together in Camborne to create a masterpiece. Instead of laying the job in straight runs as most would, Cliffy went out of his way to create a hip style flat roof enhancing the natural lines of the roof where it changed direction. Cliffy not only completed the lower roof to be ascetically pleasing, but also the main roof so that those looking down on the house would view in awe. Novak and Middleton Architects and the owners are very pleased with the outcome.

Tips From The Trainer

As the days are getting cooler there is more moisture in the air. Make sure you are allowing more time for the solvents to disperse. Trapped solvents can lead to bubbling problems. You can also have problems with moisture in the substrate, a simple test is to loose lay a square meter of Butynol onto the substrate and leave for 10 minutes then lift off. If moisture is present the substrate will have become noticeably damp, this means more drying is required.

Another point to remember to help comply with Ardex specifications is to make sure you are using seam primer with the seam tape, applied with a scrubber pad. If you are not laying to Ardex specifications you put your Warranties at risk!
